When civil law countries recognize punitive damages

On 5 July 2017, the Italian Court of Cassation, as the French Court of Cassation in December 2010, affirmed that punitive damages are not contrary to international public order. Punitive damages are defined as “the costs that are awarded to a person due to negligence that has caused personal injury or damage to personal property. [...]

Enforcement of arbitral awards: Creditors, don't wait too long!

Most of the time, arbitral awards are enforced spontaneously by the losing party. When the party refuses, it is then necessary to initiate an enforcement procedure before national jurisdictions. In France, the enforcement procedure is rather simple: the winning party will notify the award and request enforcement before the Tribunal de Grande Instance sitting as [...]
